

In poetry, anacrusis is the lead-in syllables, collectively, that precede the first full measure. Similarly, in music, it is the note or notes (even a phrase) which precede the first downbeat in a bar. In the latter sense an anacrusis is often called a pickup, pickup note, or pickup measure, referring to the syncope. A piece of music beginning with an anacrusis will also end before the last beat of the last bar, in order to keep the number of bars in the entire piece at a

according to Wikipedia:

the "pick-up" note

Amen

Joshua 1:8 NLT says:

Only then will you succeed.

- How do I "lead into" my day?
- What is or about whom am I thinking in the morning and evening?
- How does God create balance in my life?
- What do I need to get rid of to have God lead off my life?

My Answers: